WILDE TRACKS TEAM: DID YOU KNOW?

Kasey Pedersen
Director of Veterinary Programs

From the vast plains of Africa to the lush forests of Central America, Kasey has gained hands-on experience in wildlife conservation across the globe. Her journey has included dehorning rhinos, collaring cheetahs, removing snares from endangered wild dogs, and translocating kudu and zebra - each effort a crucial part of protecting these magnificent animals.

Her work hasn't stopped there. In Central America, Kasey has also been deeply involved in wildlife rescue and rehabilitation, caring for species like coatimundis, foxes, coyotes, macaws, sloths, ocelots, margays, porcupines, and many more.

Kasey is incredibly grateful to the veterinary and rehabilitation teams who have guided and inspired her. These experiences fuel her passion to share knowledge with others - especially those embarking on their own veterinary or conservation missions.

Because the more you learn, the more you can share - and the more animals you can help.

Conservation Mission - June 2025

Another month, another mission complete! This June, we welcomed 8 amazing guests—5 from the UK, 2 from Italy, and 1 from Australia—who joined us in making a real impact on the ground.

Highlights:

- 1 Lioness Collared – Helps with species tracking and reducing human-wildlife conflict.
- 2 Black Rhinos Dehorned– A big win! Black rhinos are solitary browsers and tough to find in thick bush.
- 1 White Rhino Dehorned – Key for anti-poaching efforts.

Each success brings us closer to protecting these incredible animals.

Thank you to everyone who made it possible!

Conscientious Conservation

Recently, troubling videos have surfaced showing safari companies acting irresponsibly—allowing guests out of vehicles, disturbing wildlife, and putting both animals and people at risk, all for the perfect Instagram shot.

Let us be clear: this is not endorsed by Wilde Tracks.

We stand with the safari operators who respect wildlife from a distance. Those who allow animals to behave naturally, while we simply observe and marvel at their beauty. Our veterinary interventions occur only when truly necessary—not for entertainment, but for the welfare of the animal.

Our anti-poaching teams are made up of real, passionate, and deeply dedicated individuals. We are honored to work alongside them in protecting wildlife.

At Wilde Tracks, conscious conservation means putting animals first—now, and always.

Wilde Tracks: Expanding Our Reach

Wilde Tracks has had the privilege of working with incredible foundations in northern Tanzania—supporting local education, empowering women, and bringing the wonder of wildlife to children in the Serengeti and Ngorongoro Crater.

These heartwarming experiences have inspired us to expand our reach to the south! With more participants joining our humanitarian and conservation missions, we're able to connect with more communities and make an even greater impact.

There are only a few spots left on our October 2025 trip—join us and see firsthand what compassion, collaboration, and a love for wildlife can achieve.

And stay tuned... exciting new updates are coming for 2026!
